Dear Sir

I have just received your note, and shall be happy to add my name to the very good list you already have, and to contribute to a subscription if any is opened for the purpose. I cannot, however, be one of the

Dear Jane

On the winding up of my father's affairs, there were a few items of property which remained in my hands, because they neither brought in any income, nor had any saleable value. They consisted of the following:

Half the copyright of "Elements of Political Economy."

Copyright of "Analysis of the Human Mind"

Copyright and unsold stock of "Fragment on Mackintosh" which was published anonymously.

A £100 share in University College.

of the Fragment, and the University College share, should become my own property.

You can take time to consider the proposal, and can consult anybody you like, a provisional valuation of the different items at your choice. When you have made up your mind you can write to me.

I shall write to the same effect to my other sisters and to Mme de Kavanjan.

I hope you, as well as M. Serrabouche and your children, are in good health.

Yours affectionately —

J. S. Mill

These have continued to be completely unproductive. The copyright of the Political Economy has expired. The copyright of the Analysis will expire in 1871, and that of the Fragment in 1877.

I am projecting a new edition of the Analysis, with notes and additions by Mr Bain and myself. For this purpose it would be convenient that the copyright, which is already legally vested in me, should belong to me in my own right; and if any new arrangement is made, it will be as well to include all the other items in it.

I have asked Messrs Longman & Co of Paternoster Row to value the copyrights, and their reply is that they are of no value; that they could not be sold for any price whatever. The unsold copies of the Fragment, 578 in number, Messrs Longman value at 6d per copy, making £14.9. The share in University College, which has never at any time brought in any income, might in the opinion of my brokers, Messrs Pepperrone and Price, be sold for perhaps £5; making the total value of the unsold items of property £19.9.

In order, however, that you and my other sisters may derive some pecuniary benefit from the notes and additions which I think of publishing with the Analysis I propose that I should pay £100 (£20 to each of my sisters and £20 to Mme de Kavajan) and that the unexpired term of the copyrights, the unsold copies

Dear Madam

By communicating with Mr G. Wyrouboff, 5 Rue des Beaux arts, Paris, you will be able to obtain the names of the Russian ladies to whom I wrote, and information on the work in which they are engaged. We endeavour to form an international Association for the improvement of the education of women would be very useful, and if the Princess of Prussia is sufficiently interested in it to be the President, it might make considerable progress at once.

I am glad to hear of the intended publication of a volume of Essays of the kind mentioned in your letter; but it will not be in my power to be one of the writers, as my time is fully occupied. I am Dear Madam

yours very truly
